

GLIDDEN TOURISTS

On 1700 Mile Journey Will Spend Sunday at

BEDFORD SPRINGS HOTEL

Change in Rules Requires Each Car to Carry Observer—The Daily Distances and Stopping Places.

Yesterday morning at 7 o'clock the participants in the fifth annual contest for the Glidden trophy and the second, for the Hower prize, under the auspices of the American Automobile Association, left Buffalo on their trip of nearly 1,700 miles, through seven different states.

During their tour they will have to cross five mountains. The tour originated in 1905, when Charles J. Glidden, the chronic globe girdler, donated a big and handsome trophy to the American Automobile Association, to be a perpetual prize for a yearly tour. According to the original deed of gift the prize was to be for driving qualities and was to go to the club of which the winning driver was a member. The first year the trophy was voted, at the end of the tour, to Percy Pierce of the Buffalo Automobile Club. The second and third years it remained in the possession of the Buffalo Club, because of there being tie scores at the end of the tour and no club had explicitly won it from the Buffalo club. This year new rules have been drawn up and everything possible done to effect a distinct winning of the trophy by the cars forming the team of some one club.

The rules for this event have been changed each year with the consent of the donor of the trophy, but the 1908 tour will be the first time it has officially been called "Touring Contest." It is the first year in which the cars have been required to carry observers, who will note every repair and adjustment and all that happens to the cars. Points will be forfeited for all repairs and for failure to run on schedule. The conditions, the route and the schedule, taken together, are such that it will be a credit to every car that survives and no disgrace to lose a few points. The trophy will be awarded to the club whose team loses the fewest points, and it will be any one's prize until the finish, because the very worst day of travel will be the last day, when the schedule calls for nearly 200 miles entirely over mountain roads. On this day any of the weak brethren who have been staggering along, are likely to lose points galore, or be left by the roadside.

The itinerary of the tour, starting at Buffalo and giving the places where the overnight stops will be made and the distance of each day's run is as follows:

July	Miles
9—To Cambridge Springs	117.4
10—To Pittsburg	110.2
11—To Bedford Springs	106.4
12—Sunday, at Bedford Springs
13—To Harrisburg	107.3
14—To Philadelphia	133.5
15—To Milford	132
16—To Albany	158.5
17—To Boston	194.2
18-19—At Boston
20—To Poland Springs	154
21—To Rangleys Lake, Me.	141.7
22—To Bethlehem, N. H.	130
23—To Saratoga, N. Y.	184.5

The tourists will reach here tomorrow afternoon. They will leave Pittsburg at 7 o'clock and on the day's tour will pass through New Alexandria, Blairsville, Armagh, Johnstown, Windber and Pleasantville, entering Bedford by way of the Hollidaysburg pike. They will follow the pike to Harrisburg.

CHAMPIONSHIP GAME

Everett Defeats Coaldale at Anderson Park Wednesday.

Not since Old Home Week has Bedford been so aroused as on the occasion of the Everett-Coaldale game on Wednesday and never before did a crowd of equal size assemble at Anderson Park.

The stores of the town closed during the afternoon to allow all employees to witness the battle royal between the two teams in contest for the championship of the county and a purse of $100. Bedford Springs furnished a creditable delegation and the morning train from the north brought many from Saxton, Coaldale, Riddlesburg, Hopewell and Everett. The crowd was orderly and there was none of the usual kicking against the decisions of Umpire O'Neal of Johnstown.

But for a breakup in the Everett team in the last inning, which gave Coaldale four runs, the score would have been 6-1 in favor of the Big Borough boys. The score follows:

KILLED BY FALLING TREE

Albert Burket Meets Almost Instant Death at Pavia.

Last Thursday while cutting timber for William Claar at Pavia, Albert Burket was almost instantly killed. He and a companion were sawing down a large tree when it suddenly fell and a broken branch in the top struck Mr. Burket on the head, fracturing his skull in a terrible manner. Death resulted within a few minutes. One of the woodsmen fainted at the horrible sight.

The injured man, who was a son of Mr. and Mrs. Adolphus Burket, was 33 years of age and leaves a wife and two small children. The funeral was held Saturday morning. His family has the sympathy of the entire community.

DEMOCRATIC NATIONAL CONVENTION

Now in Session at Denver---Keynote Sounded by Temporary Chairman Theodore A. Bell---Blind Senator Started Applause That Lasted One Hour and 26 Minutes---Bryan Will Be Nominated Today---Vice Presidential Nomination in Doubt.

WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN

There were few vacant seats in the great hall at Denver when, at 12:25 o'clock on Tuesday, National Chairman Thomas Taggart called to order the National Democratic nominating convention. Bishop James Keene of Wyoming made the opening prayer which he concluded with the petition that the work of the convention exhibit and embody the Divine idea.

Opening Speech

Then followed the speech of Temporary Chairman Bell whose masterful address was listened to with close attention. He employed clean but strong language, interjecting many striking epigrams. He pleaded for honesty of purpose and the restoration to the people of the right to govern themselves.

The demonstration of the day came when, after a scholarly arraignment of the Republican party's confession of guilt, made last month in Chicago and a declaration that "the people built the White House and sent one man at a time to occupy it under the law that no man can transfer his personal popularity to his protegee," Mr. Bell exclaimed: "Why should the people be in doubt when this convention will give them a man who for the past 12 years has been the embodiment of all they ask for?"

Then for a few minutes the Bryan enthusiasm was let loose and the speaker had time to catch his breath while delegates and spectators shouted themselves hoarse.

A similar scene followed the statement, "The tariff must not be made an accomplice of the monopolies robbing the people." Altogether the speech was satisfying to most of the interests represented except the ultra-conservative and the representatives of the "predatory corporations," and the Democratic hosts appear to be inspired by the lofty ideals reached out for.

Extracts From Keynote Speech

Republican revision and Democratic revision are two different things. There is a vast difference between the protection of American industries and the protection of criminal monopolies.

We search in vain for one syllable in the Chicago platform pledging the Republican party to retrenchment and reforms; and it is no mere coincidence that has given us a billion-dollar session of Congress on the eve of a national election and the possible revision of the tariff.

It is easier to prevent monopoly than it is to control it after being established. An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure, and the withdrawal of special privileges will take away the meat upon which the Trusts are fed.

The triumph of the people can come only through the Democratic party, for the life of its chief political opponent is so absorbed into the artificial life of the monopolies and Trusts that it excludes the hope that the Republican party will ever be able or willing to regain a separate existence where it can honestly discharge its duty to the people.

The cry of confiscation is the historic defense of usurpation. Let the people take warning. Whenever the wrongs of today become the vested rights of tomorrow the nation is in deadly peril.

Viewed in the light of a great moral institution, the control of corporations should remain a question of common concern rather than a political one; but the shameful complacency of the Republican party in permitting its forces to be controlled and operated by the most offending corporations of the country throws the problem into the political arena and compels the public to choose between the Democratic party that will, and the Republican party that will not, place some restrictions on incorporated greed.

Tribute to Cleveland

The following resolutions, prepared by friends of Mr. Bryan, on the death of Ex-President Grover Cleveland were presented by I. J. Dunn of Omaha, Neb., and adopted by the convention:

As it has pleased the Ruler of the Universe to remove from our midst Grover Cleveland, late President of the United States, who was three times the candidate of the Democratic party; be it

Resolved, That we, the delegates of the party, in national convention assembled, recognize in him one of the strongest and ablest characters known to the world's statesmanship, who possessed to an extraordinary degree, the elements of leadership and by his able, conscientious and forceful administration of public affairs, reflected honor upon his country and his party; and,

Resolved, That we hereby express our deep sorrow at his death and extend our warmest sympathy and condolence to his family, and that this resolution be spread upon the records of the convention and a copy be forwarded to Mrs. Cleveland; and,

Resolved, As a further mark of re-

HISTORIC GROUND

War Incidents of the Shenandoah Valley Recalled by

REV. JOHN H. BARNEY

Change in Customs—No Contending Armies Now Deal Death—General Wright's Headquarters.

Mr. Editor:—If I could write like Happy Bill I would like to tell your readers of my visit to the beautiful Shenandoah Valley of Virginia. By your indulgence I will do the best I can and leave to your judgment whether it would look better in the waste basket or in The Gazette. On June 2 I left my home in Clearville, and the morning of the third found me at Hancock, Md. Soon the iron horse made his appearance, and in a short time I was in Martinsburg, W. Va., where I spent a short time in sight-seeing. Two p. m. found me on board a train on the C. V. R. R., bound for Winchester. Time has wrought changes in customs in this beautiful valley. In my boyhood days the golden grain was cut with the old-fashioned grain cradle and many a Bedford and Fulton county boy could come down here and harvest, then return home in time for harvest on his own home hills. Now the reaper takes the place of the cradle, but it is not of that so much I want to write. The farmers have found there is something more profitable than raising wheat and corn and have turned their attention to fruit culture.

As you look out of your car window you will not see contending armies arrayed in battle lines, but as far as the natural eye will carry you will see not only hundreds but thousands of acres in orchards, all in a high state of cultivation. Here I am in Winchester, historic Winchester! All school children have read about Winchester; it has a prominent place in the history of our country. In the early struggle of our forefathers for independence (in her beautiful cemetery sleeps one of her citizen soldiers of Revolutionary fame in the person of Maj. Gen. Dan Morgan) as well as in the war of '61 and '65, Winchester was occupied more than fifty times by the contending armies, north and south. Being in an open country it was a position that no army could successfully hold against an invading army of equal force, as General Milroy found out to his sorrow.

Here I go on up the valley: first is Kearns town where in March, 1862, Stonewall Jackson of Confederate fame met his first and only defeat at the hands of that sturdy old Irish general, James Shields, who defeated Stonewall, and had he not been wounded and carried off the field we have every reason to believe Jackson's entire army would have been captured; here also in 1864 the hero of Lexington, Gen. James Mulligan, another Irishman, gave his life to his adopted country. A few years ago I stood as near the spot as can be told where he fell from his horse, and heard the story, told by one who saw the fight and was a participant in it, how his faithful soldiers of the 39th Illinois tried to carry him off the field. When he saw that they would all be killed, how he told them to set him down and lean him up against a large locust. He said, "I want to die with my face to the enemy." As I stood under the shadow of that tree, what sacred memories it called to my mind! for my own regiment at one time was brigaded with his regiment. The next town is called Stevenson, formerly Newtown. Here we are now at Cedar Creek.

As you go up the valley and look out to your left you see an old-fashioned Virginia residence of ante bellum days. It was General Wright's headquarters on that memorable and never-to-be-forgotten October 19, 1864. All around it—to the left of it, to the right of it—pandemonium reigned—the surprise, the stubborn resistance, the retreat, the stop, the arrival of Sheridan, the defeat of the morning turned into a glorious victory in the afternoon!

History tells it far better than your humble scribe, but here and there are facts and incidents on which history is silent. Look yonder on that elevation! see a granite monument go up as I did a few years ago in company with my beloved wife; stand with uncovered head and tears in your eyes and read. At or near this spot on the early morning of October 19, 1864, the Eighth Vermont, General Thomas commanding, went into position with 165 men, and in fifteen minutes lost 110 killed and wounded; three color-bearers were shot dead; every line officer was killed or wounded; think of such fearful loss of human life! How true Sherman's definition that "War is Hell!" Here I drop my pen. If this misses the waste basket you will hear from me again.

AN AGED COLORED WOMAN.

Mrs. Chaney Tillman has Passed the Age of 102 Years.

Mrs. Chaney Tillman, of 2312 Ninth avenue, a highly respected colored lady of this city, better known as "Old Aunt Chaney" Tillman, who has passed the age of 102 years was given a surprise by some of the members of the Altoona police force a few days ago. After an expedition into "Bum Woods" at the far end of the city, Sergeant Fleet, Constable Spangler and a number of the city's patrolmen purchased a big lot of fruit and other luxuries, and gave the old lady a surprise party at her home on Ninth avenue, the officers spending several hours listening to the story the old lady had to tell of her life in the South. Mrs. Tillman has a remarkable memory. She is remarkable in many other ways. She can see to read a paper, or thread a needle without the use of glasses. She has been sick but a few days in her life and has an excellent appetite.

Throughout her long life, Mrs. Tillman has always worked hard and still does some work each day. She rises at 6 o'clock in the morning, makes her own bed and then assists with the ordinary housework during the day. During the middle of this month the aged lady will take her first railroad journey in many years, it being her intention to pay an extended visit to her only surviving brother in Bedford county.—Altoona Tribune.

RHEUMATIC FOLKS!

Are You Sure Your Kidneys Are Well?

Many rheumatic attacks are due to uric acid in the blood. But the duty of the kidneys is to remove all uric acid from the blood. Its presence there shows the kidneys are inactive. Don't dally with "uric acid solvents." You might go on till doomsday with them, but until you cure the kidneys you will never get well. Doan's Kidney Pills not only remove uric acid, but cure the kidneys and then all danger from uric acid is ended. Here is Bedford testimony to prove it.

Mrs. William Piper, living on Penn street, Bedford, Pa., said: "My mother suffered severely from rheumatism and kidney ailment for a long time. She was getting well along in years and we did not think she would get any relief. She was always very stiff and lame and her back pained her a great deal. I saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised and was so much impressed that I procured a box at Irvine's Drug Store. She had only taken them a short time when she felt much better, her strength returned and the backaches were banished. I consider Doan's Kidney Pills a most reliable remedy."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's— and take no other. July 10-20.

Wonderful Water Tank

A very large water tank, supported by a steel frame, has been recently erected as a part of the water supply system of the city of Louisville, Ky., which is of interest as a marvel of this character of construction. The tank has a capacity of 1,200,000 gallons of water, equal to a 10,000,000-pound load. It is riveted steel cylinder 50 feet in diameter and 65 feet 4 inches in height, with a hemispherical bottom and a conical roof, and is supported on eight battered riveted steel columns 155 feet high. A vertical riveted steel pipe 50 inches in diameter is connected to the center of the bottom, and to horizontal mains about 12 feet below the surface of the ground and serves both for inlet and outlet. The lower part of the tank is surrounded by an annular steel balcony platform and handrail, accessible from the ground by steel ladders carried up on one of the lower columns. The curved bottom of this tank, as it stood inverted on the ground in the course of erection, was as large as a dwelling of ordinary proportions.

This is what Hon. Jake Moore, State Warden of Georgia, says of Kodol For Dyspepsia: "E. C. DeWitt & Co., Chicago, Ill.—Dear Sirs—I have suffered more than twenty years from indigestion. About eighteen months ago I had grown so much worse that I could not digest a crust of corn bread and could not retain anything on my stomach. I lost 25 lbs.; in fact I made up my mind that I could not live but a short time, when a friend of mine recommended Kodol. I consented to try it to please him and was better in one day. I now weigh more than I ever did in my life and am in better health than for many years. Kodol did it. I keep a bottle constantly, and write this hoping that humanity may be benefitted. Yours very truly, Jake C. Moore, Atlanta, Aug. 10, 1904." Sold by Ed. D. Heckerman.

It Can't Be Beat.

The best of all teachers is experience. C. M. Harden, of Silver City, North Carolina, says: "I find Electric Bitters does all that's claimed for it. For Stomach, Liver and Kidney troubles it can't be beat. I have tried it and find it a most excellent medicine." Mr. Harden is right; it's the best of all medicines also for weakness, lame back, and all run down conditions. Best too for chills and malaria. Sold under guarantee at all Druggists. 50c.

Learn How to Rest.

A knowledge of how to rest will be a saving of many ill attacks. One might think that each individual would know the best way for her to find repose, but I have seen so many women fling themselves down to "rest," with all their clothes on, necks bound in tight collars and closely corseted, that I realize comparatively few have even a notion of how to relax body and mind. Resting is a science, and to do it so that one will be refreshed, it is necessary to completely relax. There will be little or no renewal of strength if the nerves and brain work like mad during the "rest."

Three things essential to repose are light garments, quiet and a subdued light. Lacking any one of these much good is lost, and twenty minutes used in this way are worth hours of lying down without relaxing.

A woman who is at home all day may take such a rest at any time that she chooses to arrange her household affairs for that purpose, but for a business woman it is different. Yet she needs it, and I wish all would try using a half-hour in this way when they come from a day down-town, particularly while the summer heat has been exhausting.

To begin the "rest" first remove all the clothes one has worn during the day and, if possible, take a shower bath. Failing this a sponging in cold water (a real sponging, not a bath) is sufficient, and then don a thin dressing gown.

No matter how small the apartment, there must be one room into which a person can go to be quiet, and there she should lie herself.

There is one preparation known today that will promptly help the stomach. This is Kodol. Kodol digests all classes of food, and it does it thoroughly, so that the use of Kodol for a time will without doubt help anyone who has stomach disorders or stomach trouble. Take Kodol today and continue it for the short time that is necessary to give you complete relief. Kodol is sold by Ed. D. Heckerman.

Care of Umbrellas.

After coming in out of the rain let the umbrella down, and stand it on the handle, that it may dry in this position. The water will thus drip from the edges of the frame, and the cover dry uniformly.

When placed with the handle upward, as is frequently done, the water runs to the top of the umbrella and the moisture is there retained in the lining underneath the ring, causing the silk or fabric with which the frame is covered to become tender and soon rot.

Ordinarily, the top of an umbrella wears out sooner than any other part of it, and in the majority of cases may be thus accounted for.

A silk umbrella is much injured by being left open to dry; the silk becomes stretched and stiff and will sooner split than cared for.

When not in use, let the folds hang loose, not fastened down. The creases are less apt to split from such usage.—New York Press.

Bert Barber, of Milton, Wis., says: "I have only taken four doses of your Kidney and Bladder Pills and they have done for me more than any other medicine has ever done. I am still taking the pills as I want a perfect cure." Mr. Barber refers to DeWitt's Kidney and Bladder Pills. Sold by Ed. D. Heckerman.

A Revelation.

It is a revelation to people, the severe cases of lung trouble that have been cured by Foley's Honey and Tar. It not only stops the cough but heals and strengthens the lungs. L. M. Ruggles, Reasnor, Iowa, writes: "The doctors said I had consumption, and I got no better until I took Foley's Honey and Tar. It stopped the hemorrhages and pain in my lungs and they are now as sound as a bullet." Ed. D. Heckerman.

July Burr McIntosh.

The second of the summer numbers of this, "the most beautiful magazine in the world," is now on all news stands.

This issue contains considerable variety in the way of very fine landscapes, several pictures covering the cruise of the U. S. Fleet along the California Coast after its memorable trip from New York around Cape Horn. There are a number of particularly fine landscapes taken under peculiar conditions which appeal to the photographer, amateur as well as professional. One of the several color studies in this number is a portrait of Col. William F. Cody, (Buffalo Bill) taken expressly for the Burr McIntosh Monthly while Mr. Cody was in New York, and this will appeal to every one, young and old, to whom the Wild West show and its leader is endeared.

Among the prominent stage people portrayed are Robert Mantell, said to be the only actor living who promises to be a worthy successor of Mansfield, Sir Henry Irving and Edwin Booth; Marie Tempest, the popular comedy actress; Mme. Fritz Scheff, comic opera singer; Margaret Illington, who made a great success in the drama "The Thief," and the every-popular Maude Adams in one of the scenes from "The Jester."

Art receives the usual attention, reproductions from the famous pictures shown at the Annual National Exhibition at the Carnegie Galleries, Pittsburgh, being given. This number cannot fail to please those who are interested in artistic photography and pictures of unusual beauty presented in an unusual manner.

War Against Consumption.

All nations are endeavoring to check the ravages of consumption, the "white plague" that claims so many victims each year. Foley's Honey and Tar cures coughs and colds perfectly and you are in no danger of consumption. Do not risk your health by taking some unknown preparation when Foley's Honey and Tar is safe and certain in results. E. D. Heckerman.

Don't use harsh physics. The reaction weakens the bowels, leads to chronic constipation. Get Doan's Reglets. They operate easily, tone the stomach, cure constipation.

Good Biscuits.

One cup flour, one teaspoon lard, one teaspoon baking powder, one-fourth teaspoon salt. Mix flour, lard, baking powder, and salt with a spoon; add sufficient sweet milk or cold water to make a stiff dough. Flour board and roll till about a half inch thick. Cut out and bake in quick oven. Some flour takes a little more water than others, but a scant cup is the average.

Can't look well, eat well or feel well with impure blood feeding your body. Keep the blood pure with Burdock Blood Bitters. Eat simply, take exercise, keep clean and you will have long life.

Lesson II.—Third Quarter, For July 12, 1908.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, I Sam. x, 17-27. Memory Verse, 24—Golden Text, II Sam. xxiii, 3—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Copyright, 1908, by American Press Association.] Mizpeh, first mentioned in Gen. xxxi, 49, is at least suggestive of God's watchful care, as we learn from that incident. The name is used seven times in I Sam. vii, where we see not only His watchful care, but also the great deliverance which He wrought for them as they humbled themselves before Him. In the lesson today the people are gathered that the king whom they had asked for and whom God had agreed to give them might be publicly chosen by the people themselves, evidently by lot, selecting thus the tribe and then the family and then the man (verses 20, 21). See also the same plan in Josh. vii, 10-18. God approved of this way and guided His people by it (Lev. xvi, 8; Num. xxvi, 55, 56; Prov. xvi, 33). While the people seemed to be deciding the matter it was really the Lord's decision and choice (verse 24).

Turning to the special lesson verses, we notice that Samuel, having gathered the people, reminded them how the Lord God had brought them out of Egypt and delivered them from all their oppressors and that they were that day rejecting God, who Himself had saved them out of all their adversities and tribulations (verses 18, 19). They were redeemed that they might glorify their God and magnify His name before other nations and show to them how great a God they had, even the only living and true God, in order that others might learn to know and trust Him too. But now they turn from their high calling and descend to the level of the nations before whom they were called to honor Jehovah. How sad and sinful and heartbreaking to Jehovah it all was! Hear Him after He had borne long years with them as He calls heaven and earth to witness, "I have nourished and brought up children, and they have rebelled against me" (Isa. i, 2, 3). To us He says, "Grieve not the Holy Spirit of God, whereby ye are sealed unto the day of redemption" (Eph. iv, 30-32), for we are here for Him that the world may believe on Him and know Him. When we live to please or magnify self, then we are saying that we prefer to be like other people, to be conformed to this present world, and thus we reject Him.

When Saul had been elected that day he could not be found, for with a seeming meekness or humility he had hidden himself. They inquire of the Lord, for this was Samuel's way and David's way and should be our way always, according to Prov. iii, 5, 6. The Lord revealed his hiding place, and they ran and fetched him, and as he stood among them, head and shoulders above them all, no goodlier person in all Israel, the people shouted, "God save the king!" and Samuel said, "See ye him whom the Lord hath chosen" (verses 22-24 and chapter ix, 2). When any person or thing cannot be found, it is well to remember "He that is perfect in knowledge is with thee" (Job xxxvi, 4), and consulting Him with all humility, if we have His anointing on our ears, we may hear His voice revealing the place of the lost person or thing. Many a time have I and others seen it proved, but we must be in His will and seek to magnify Him.

Samuel, having told the people the manner of the kingdom and written it in a book and laid it up before the Lord, sent all to their homes, Saul also going to his home. God raised up a band of friends who went with him, but there were some who despised him, and to these he was as though he had been deaf (verse 27, margin). See also Ps. xxxviii, 13, and let us so act when the occasion arises. Returning to the story in chapter ix of the way God provided and pointed out Saul to Samuel, we learn how in all the most ordinary events of daily life God is working out His purposes. On Saul's side of the story we simply see some lost asses and Saul and one of his father's servants out seeking them. After a long and unsuccessful search Saul urges that they return lest his father should be anxious for them instead of the asses. The servant suggested that as they were near a city where lived a man of God whose every word came to pass (verse 6) they should consult him before returning home, to which Saul consented. On Samuel's side we read that the Lord had said to him, "Tomorrow about this time I will send thee a man" (verse 10), and Samuel had accordingly made all preparation to welcome him. Now see the consummation, the arrival of the weary travelers, the welcome, the surprise party, the night at Samuel's home, the setting forth next morning of Saul and his servant, Samuel's startling communication to Saul, the anointing, the incidents which would happen as Saul went on his way and the saying which some of us are finding so restful and helpful in chapter x, 7, "Do as occasion serve thee, for God is with thee." Let us believe that in the commonplace of life, with all their discouragements, God is leading us on to a kingdom. Let us trust Him for anointed ears that He may whisper in our ears (ix, 15) and that He may not need to knock us down before He can make us hear. As to being chosen by Him, take comfort from John xv, 16; Eph. i, 4.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY.

Warm salad oil will relieve earache.

Always try to pass at least one hour a day in the open air.

Never use on the face a wash rag which is not scalded every day.

Never let a child or infant sleep in the room with a sick person.

It is very bad taste to place beautiful jewelry upon neglected fingers.

Do not think that scrubbing will injure your complexion, for it will not.

Cocoa butter will smooth the rough elbow, but it must be persistently used.

Quickly apply raw egg to a cut; it will allay the pain and quickly heal the wound.

For unbroken chilblains rubbing with damp salt is one of the best remedies known.

If possible have children sleep in darkened rooms, as a light is bad for both eyes and nerves.

Caster oil rubbed onto warts has been known to cure those that have obstinately refused to yield to other remedies.

When a finger has been pinched, if it is at once immersed in boiling water, the inflammation will be quickly allayed.

When a child is restless from teething it can often be quieted by giving it a warm bath. The water should be as hot as can be endured without burning. Do not allow the child to stay in the bath long or weakness will result.

Tears have their use apart from the crying aspect, inasmuch as they refresh and wash the eyes of animals and birds who live exposed to the dust. The eye requires to be kept clear and clean and tears perform this duty. A striking example of this is shown when the eye is hurt; it at once commences to water and often this natural method of cleansing relieves the pain and removes the cause of the discomfort.

The Remedy That Does.

"Dr. King's New Discovery is the remedy that does the healing others promise but fail to perform," says Mrs. E. R. Pierson, of Auburn Centre, Pa. "It is curing me of throat and lung trouble of long standing, that other treatments relieved only temporarily. New Discovery is doing me so much good that I feel confident its continued use for a reasonable length of time will restore me to perfect health." This renowned cough and cold remedy and throat and lung healer is sold at all druggists. 50c. and $1.00. Trial bottle free.

Defining Primary Colors.

Primary colors are the colors into which white light is separated by the dispersion of a prism. Those named by Newton, are red, orange, yellow, green, blue, indigo and violet. Artists reduce these in three—red, yellow and blue. Scientists generally consider red, green and blue to represent the primary color sensations, and in one theory there are supposed to be three sets of nerves in the retina which can respond to these colors. The idea of three primary colors is that from the combination of these three colors all hues may be produced which are to be found in white light.

Best the World Affords.

"It gives me unbounded pleasure to recommend Bucklen's Arnica Salve," says J. W. Jenkins, of Chapel Hill, N. C. "I am convinced it's the best salve the world affords. It cured a felon on my thumb, and it never fails to heal every sore, burn or wound to which it is applied. 25c. at all druggists."

Hidden Tour News

A new feature of interest in the A. A. A. touring contest for the Glidden trophy this year will be the observer's records of tire troubles. It is not certain as yet how complete these records will be, beyond noting the time lost repairing or changing tires, but it is possible that full details may be put down on the observer's card. It was proposed by Orrel A. Parker of the Automobile Club of America that a tire contest should be framed up and conducted in conjunction with that for the Glidden trophy, but it was decided this would complicate matters too much. The tire makers do much to help along the national touring contest every year and there is a sentiment in favor of more attention being paid to the performances of tires in the contest.

Regarding the matter, a representative tire maker, H. G. Fisk, of the Fisk Rubber Company, says: "The Glidden tour is the best event there is for a practical test of tires as well as of cars and it seems a pity that the public cannot learn from it as much about the performances of the tires in it, as they learn of the performances of the cars. The tire makers spend considerable money supporting the tour and would seem entitled to consideration. It is a question, however, whether the tire people can agree as to how much detail they want recorded. I think it would be fair for all to have the tires used by each car stamped on the observer's card and a complete record kept of every change of tube or shoe and the cause for the change. This would act as something of a check on deceptive announcements concerning the absence of troubles with tires, and that would be a great deal, for it is not so much by false statements of excellent performances that tires are misrepresented, as it is by the concealment of troubles. If the tire makers agree, a very satisfactory record could be kept by the observers without much trouble and the public could learn something about tires in a new and very practical way."

"Fool Resolutions" for the Captain.

Two things the experienced ocean traveler never does—he never asks useless questions, and he never signs the fool resolutions in praise of the captain, which the passengers invariably prepare whenever there is a head wind and a trifling sea. A man who has taken his ship across the seas in fair weather and foul for, perhaps, thirty years, cannot be expected to enthuse over a set of resolutions which, if they go to prove anything, merely prove that you are profoundly grateful to have escaped with your life while under his care. And even if the voyage has been sufficiently perilous to justify this gratitude, he prefers the consciousness of work well done to any fulsome flattery which you can bestow. For one thing, there is scarcely a captain in the service of any of the big transatlantic companies who has not been called upon to play an heroic part many times in his career, and when he has faced for seventy hours at a stretch, with no more sustenance than black coffee, the gales that roar over the ocean; when he has been tortured by need of sleep, frozen by ice-cold spray and pierced by wintry winds; when he has known what it is, not once, but a hundred times, to breathe by sheer force of the muscles of his body, exerted against the elements, in order that you may sleep snugly in your berth below, why then your praise is apt to sound in his ears with the faint significance of cow bells in a summer pasture. From "The Log of an Ocean Traveler," by Aubrey Lanston in The Bohemian Magazine for July.

Rev. I. W. Williams Testifies.

Rev. I. W. Williams, Huntington, W. Va., testifies as follows: "This is to certify that I used Foley's Kidney Remedy for nervous exhaustion and kidney trouble, and am free to say that Foley's Kidney Remedy will do all that you claim for it." Ed. D. Heckerman.

Molasses Drop Cake.

Boil together two cups of molasses, one cup of brown sugar, one-half cup of lard and one-half cup of water. Before boiling dissolve in the half cup of water one teaspoon of ginger, one of cloves and a little salt. After boiling thoroughly, being careful not to burn, and when cold, add two eggs, beaten light, one tablespoon of soda in flour; sift and stir quite thick. Drop on reverse side of baking pan. Nut meats and raisins may be added.

Troubles.

For people who worry here is a prescription, paradoxical in form, by Frank Moss:

"Add more trouble. The trouble with most folks is they haven't enough trouble. If you're troubled by trouble it's because you're in it only about to the extent of one shoulder. Carry more. You're one-sided—all the weight is on the single shoulder. Load up the other and retain your balance."

Not all the wisdom of the ages is compressed in this paragraph, and yet there is truth in it. Troubles have the force of repulsion for each other. Their action would be characterized in Brooklyn as "reciprocal evisceration." One expels or destroys the other, if they be of different species.

Most of us do not have any real troubles, anything of size. So we concentrate our minds on a multitude of little trifling troubles, and the effect is as bad for the mental vision as if we pored long over a page of small type. There is something about a large, imposing trouble that quiets the clamor of little frets, even though upon some nature it may lay the peace of despair. Its effect is like the distant view of a snow-capped mountain peak.

The people who worry the most are always those who have the least to worry about.—New York Mail.

Just Exactly Right.

"I have used Dr. King's New Life Pills for several years, and find them just exactly right," says Mr. A. A. Felton, of Harrisville, N. Y. New Life Pills relieve without the least discomfort. Best remedy for constipation, biliousness and malaria. 25c. at all druggists.

Orange Ice.

Boil one quart of water, then pour it over one pound of sugar. When the latter has dissolved, pour the sirup over the carefully extracted juice of six oranges and two lemons. Let it stand for about thirty minutes; then strain and freeze. If a sherbet is to be made, add the stiffly beaten whites of two eggs just before packing the ice. Any other fruit may be used in the same way.

Laundry Notes.

To make any clothing extra stiff when laundering, it is best to dry the garments first, then run through starch and dry the second time. Flour starch should not be used for dainty waists, since it gives a yellow tinge to them. A mixture of lump and gloss starch will be best and such articles should be wrapped in damp towels instead of being sprinkled before ironing.

Often The Kidneys Are Weakened by Over-Work.

Unhealthy Kidneys Make Impure Blood.

It used to be considered that only urinary and bladder troubles were to be traced to the kidneys, but now modern science proves that nearly all diseases have their beginning in the disorder of these most important organs.

The kidneys filter and purify the blood—that is their work. Therefore, when your kidneys are weak or out of order, you can understand how quickly your entire body is affected and how every organ seems to fail to do its duty.

If you are sick or "feel badly," begin taking the great kidney remedy, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, because as soon as your kidneys are well they will help all the other organs to health. A trial will convince anyone.

If you are sick you can make no mistake by first doctoring your kidneys. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases, and is sold on its merits by all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles. You may have a sample bottle of Swamp-Root by mail free, also a pamphlet telling you how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. Mention this paper when writing to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

Making Thin Waists.

In making thin muslin, silk, or lawn waists always cut a piece of the same by a dress-shield pattern and lay right side towards wrong side of waist and stick in with the sleeve. This strengthens the armhole and if there is wear under the arm the patch is already there, but with the patch there before the waist is worn, it is seldom needed.

Buttermilk Cookies.

Two cups light brown sugar, one cup butter, one cup buttermilk, two eggs, one cup chopped raisins, one-third teaspoonful soda, one teaspoonful baking powder, flour to mix soft. The cookies should be light and soft, and will keep for weeks. The secret is in using the soft sugar.

Song of the Souls that Failed.

We come from the war-swept valleys, Where the strong ranks clash in might, Where the broken rear-guard rallies For its last and losing fight; From the roaring streets and highways, Where the mad crowds move abreast,

We come to the wooded by-ways, To cover our grief, and rest.

Not ours the ban of the coward, Not ours is the idler's shame; If we sink at last, o'erpowered, Will ye whelm us with scorn or blame?

We have seen the goal and have striven As they strive who win or die; We were burdened and harshly driven, And the swift feet passed us by.

When we hear the plaudits' thunder, And thrill to the victors' shout, We envy them not, nor wonder At the fate that cast us out.

Prize Pork.

In several instances tests have been made of both hams and bacon from hogs finished in fattening on peas. In tests of this kind of pork great quantities of peas have been grown and fed to the final finish of hogs for market. The claim is that such pork has a peculiarly sweet and palatable flavor. In one case a table test was made in the use of a few hogs so fattened, and it was found so desirable in taste and flavor that several carloads of such pork was ordered for the same market. This would indicate that we are approaching a new grading of table pork, when that fattened on peas will command a much higher price than corn-fattened pork. For great commercial purposes, however, the lard hog will be made on corn, which is grown in greater quantity per acre and at less cost than peas.

July Recreation.

The July number of the great outdoor magazine Recreation is now on all news stands and every one who is interested in healthful, clean, outdoor sports should have this number.

A series of short articles on the necessity of vacations will appeal to the business men of the city as well as to those of the smaller towns. Some of the articles in this number are "Sleeping Out At Home," profusely illustrated with photographs of utility outdoor beds. Along the same line is the second of a series of Recreation houses with illustrations and plans showing how bungalows can be made at small expense.

For those in search of big game and long trips, there is an article entitled "Some Pack Trips Worth While" also profusely illustrated. "A Vacation on Cape Cod" will attract the attention and interest of those who are inclined to favor the rugged New England coast for the vacation period. For the angler there is an article on brook trout by an expert, and another article by several experts on salmon fishing. The gun enthusiasts will find much enjoyment in "The Future of Wing Shooting" and other matter under the department headed "Game Field."

This issue of Recreation has a distinctive summer flavor which will appeal to every one.

Neuralgia Cure. THE KEYNOTE SPEECH

The speech delivered by Temporary Chairman Theodore A. Bell before the National Democratic Nominating Convention at Denver will live beyond the present campaign. It was designed to sound the keynote of the convention and of the campaign and it surpassed expectations. It is in plain, forceful English and contains no equivocations. It touches the great issues that are before the people in a manly way, and is far above personalities and partisanship; it looks to public interest and National advantage and welfare; it is patriotic through and through. It clearly outlines the difference between protection as advocated by the Democrats and by the Republicans, the former wanting protection for the plain people and American industries and the latter for criminal trusts. He points out further that the removal of special privileges will take away the meat upon which trusts feed and thereby destroy them, thus suggesting the remedy for the greatest evil existing in the nation today.
He does not pass unnoticed the contrast in the imperialistic tendency of the Republican party and the consistent advocacy of internal improvements of the Democratic party. And he discerns the inconsistency in the Chicago platform which denounces things that the party whose declaration it is has failed, during its long term in power, to remedy.

A Fine Trip

R. S. Scull, editor of the Herald, was a member of a party of five invited by Sheriff P. A. Johns of Uniontown, who is a guest at the Highland Inn, to join him on a trip to Bedford last Thursday in his auto. The trip going was made via New Baltimore, where an excellent dinner was procured at Straub's hotel; thence through New Buena Vista and Mann's Choice to the Bedford county capital. A better road than that from New Baltimore to Bedford would be hard to find for automobilists. Returning, the trip over the mountain from Bedford to Stoystown was made in exactly two hours. The running time consumed between Bedford and Somerset was two hours and forty minutes.—Somerset Herald.

MENTIONED IN BRIEF

A new pavement has been placed in front of the residence occupied by Clothier Abe Hoffman.

The Vitalia Medicine Company is being organized and it is rumored that one of our Bedford business men will be president, and an eminent physician of Washington, D. C., its general manager. Just where the general offices of the Company will be has not been determined upon as yet.

Quite a number of Hollidaysburg autoists will journey to Bedford on Saturday, to look over the Glidden tourists. Autoists will be present from all parts of Pennsylvania. Last year the people of Bedford extended a hearty welcome to the visitors, giving them full sway of the historical town, cutting out the speed limit entirely and leaving the gate wide open for the enjoyment of the tourists.—Altoona Times.

There were two games of ball played at Anderson Park on July 4 between Cumberland and Bedford, each team winning a game. There were, of course, scores, but as we are setting matter today 13 ems wide and have not time to change our line-type to a wider measure we do not give them. The visiting team put up at the Union Hotel where they made quite a record by tearing sheets and bed spreads into carpet rags, breaking electric light bulbs with ball bats, smashing china and leaving the rooms occupied in such condition as would disgrace an obscure corner of an abandoned field on a mountain side.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. A Pleasant Outing

A party of boys from the Telegraphy School spent four days, including the Fourth, in camp at Lutzville, returning to Bedford Tuesday afternoon. Several nice bass, sunfish and trout and a large number of eels were taken, although the stream was rather too muddy for good fishing. All report a good time and join in commending the people of Lutzville for their kindness to them. The party consisted of Steve Hammill, William Dick, Garrett Gregory, John Carlson, Milton Kimball and Russel Jones.

STUDENTS GRADUATE

Interesting Exercises at Broad Top High School Commencement.

The deliberate and skillful supervision of her principal, has led Broad Top township High School through another year of crowning success. After close observation, I do not hesitate to say that this year, as well as the previous four years of the existence of this High School, has shown large advances and marked improvement in the supervision and execution of its work over each preceding year.

All students recommended for the finals safely landed beyond the goal toward which they were striving, which means that good work must have been done during the year, both by them and by those under whose tuition they came; but that the public may know, the writer will state that several students fell out of line, and some even were required to drop the work of the class of which they were members, either because they were too weak or because they were unwilling to submit themselves to such discipline as is necessary to accomplish work of this nature. One thing is sure; we know the boys and girls will not be pushed on simply to obtain numbers, and we are glad of this, for we then know that when a graduate presents himself, it means that he has efficiently covered the prescribed course and has received a definite amount of culture. How much better it would be if all High Schools would follow the same principle on this point! Too often the term "graduate" carries little weight with it, for each High School has its own standard of scholarship; nor can this difficulty be remedied until there is closer classification of High Schools, as well as a closer and more exact classification of high school principals along with an absolute, strict and rigid requirement of the courses of study laid down for the various grades of High Schools.

The baccalaureate sermon, preached by Rev. R. H. Colburn on the Sunday prior to commencement, was indeed a practical one, full from beginning to end of good, wholesome, moral and religious instruction; it set forth a set of principles which our students would do well to follow through life.

This year's commencement exercises are conceded by all who were there to be far superior to any previously held by our High Schools, the students taking part in the program exhibited a large degree of efficiency and culture than any set heretofore appearing on a similar occasion. The following program was rendered:

Invocation..... Rev R. H. Colburn
Music..... Bedford Orchestra
Reading, "Public Opinion,"

Sydney M. Thomas
Music..... Bedford Orchestra
Reading, "A Plea for Enthusiasm,"

Lloyd E. Aldstadt
Address.....Prof. J. Allen Myers
Music..... Bedford Orchestra
Presentation of Diplomas.

William Lauder
Music..... Bedford Orchestra

At this point the writer wishes to say that Prof. J. Allen Myers delivered a most excellent address, one replete from start to finish with sound, energetic and wholesome doctrine for both student and parent. It clearly demonstrated to many parents their mistaken ideas of education; that acquiring an education does not mean getting ready for a "snap"—a job with little work and large pay—but rather, preparing for real, downright, zealous work—in a word, the conflicts of life. It was didactic in both end and purpose.

"It never rains but it pours," is an expression entirely appropriate at this time to Broad Top township High School. Eleven of her former and recent graduates and students took the teachers' examination at Hopewell on June 30, and all of them returned with what they went for, a teacher's certificate, and most of them were of a very good grade, considering the raised standard fixed by our new County Superintendent. I am with best wishes for Broad Top's future.

46 Stars Now in Flag

All flags for the use of the government made after July 4 will contain 46 stars in the field to conform to the number of states. An Act of Congress in the early part of the 19th century requires that a star shall be added to the flag on the admission of each new state, this to take effect on the Independence Day succeeding the admission. Oklahoma became a state on November 16, 1907, thus adding the forty-sixth star. The field now stands—first, third, fourth and sixth rows, eight stars each; second and fifth seven each.

CORRESPONDENCE

Centreville

July 8—Thursday morning when Capt. M. S. Bortz got up he found that there was something wrong with his eyes; they seemed to be drawn crooked. He is affected in his whole system; can scarcely get around, as he can't tell the distance of an object from him. We hope there will be a speedy recovery.

George Leas, his daughter, Mrs. Elizabeth Zonn, and granddaughter, Miss Zonn, of Baltimore, are visiting Rev. Green's. Mrs. Green is also a daughter.

Miss Viola V. Rose went to the Jefferson Hospital on June 10 and was operated on the next day for tumor, which weighed 17 pounds. She left the hospital last Friday, July 3, and is now at her brother, H. C. Rose's, at Saxton. She expects to be home Saturday or Sunday next.

There have been some terrific hail, rain and thunder storms near here recently. On Wednesday of last week a heavy cloud backed up from the south and came within a mile of Centreville. Rain and hail fell in such quantities that the crops on Murray and Irvin Zembowers' farms were beaten into the ground. Miller brothers, Crum and Curtis Boor and William Robinett had fields that are almost ruined by washouts. On W. H. Rose's farm one field was badly washed. Mrs. Rease Rose was on the horse rake when a bolt struck the rake. She threw up her hand and cried out to her husband, who quickly caught her. She lay stunned for several minutes. Besides a stinging sensation in her hands she doesn't seem any worse for the shock.

Saturday a week our ball team met defeat at the hands of the Hyndman boys; score 17 to 3. The three basemen did not turn out, which badly handicapped our team. There was a one sided game played here Saturday; Centreville vs. Linterville, 7 to 28 in favor of our boys. R.

THE CENSUS OF BEDFORD COUNTY, PENNSYLVANIA, IN 1772.

For many years I have been very anxious in regard to the safety of the first assessment lists of the taxable inhabitants of the county, made in 1772. They are very important and valuable, and in effect are a full enumeration or census of the entire taxable population (upwards of 1,800 in number), together with the amount of real and personal property (including slaves) owned by them respectively. The loss or destruction of these lists would be irreparable; therefore, in order for their preservation, I have procured full and accurate copies of all these assessment lists, duly certified by the Commissioners of the county under their official seal, with a view to their publication in pamphlet form, and then depositing them with the Pennsylvania Historical Society.

The pamphlet will contain these certified lists, together with a summary of the organization of the County—the several Courts, and the names and boundaries of the sixteen townships erected at the first session of the proper Court, on April 16, 1771. Also the names of the officials of the County, the Courts and the Townships in 1771-1772.

Also the names, dates and boundaries of the several Counties, which were subsequently wholly or partly formed out of the said Townships, to wit: Bedford (the mother county, which then included all Western Pennsylvania), Fulton, Huntingdon, Blair, Somerset, Cambria, Westmoreland, Fayette, Washington, Greene, Allegheny, Armstrong, Indiana, Clearfield and Center.

It will also contain the names and dates of the erection of the several Counties, which were, wholly or partly, formed out of that portion of the Fort McIntosh Purchase by the State from the Six Nations in 1784, which was originally a part of Bedford County, under the act of March 9, 1771, to wit: Allegheny, Beaver, Butler, Lawrence, Mercer, Crawford, Erie (except the triangle, which was purchased from the United States September 4, 1788), Warren, McKean, Venango, Forest, Clarion, Armstrong, Indiana, Jefferson, Elk, Clearfield and Center.

The above mentioned taxable lists will be of great interest and service to the descendants of the early settlers of the County, who now live in other Counties and States; and also to genealogists.

A limited number of the pamphlets (which will contain about 100 pages), will be published as soon as a sufficient number of subscribers have been obtained to justify its publication.

It will be mailed to subscribers for $1.00 per copy, postage paid. I prefer that no money be sent until subscribers are notified that the pamphlet will be published. And I desire to say that it will be published rather pro bono publico, than with a desire or expectation to realize a profit thereon.

EVAPORATING FRUIT.

Surplus Fruit May Thus Be Disposed of Readily and at a Profit.

The demand for fruits in various forms is increasing. Like the cereal food, it may sometimes assume the proportions of a cult. There is in every orchard much good fruit that is lost because it cannot be kept for the market, but if carefully evaporated by one of the scientific processes it will keep for some time and then may be disposed of at a profit. The process must be a good one, however. The American Agriculturist tells how to put up

EVAPORATING PLANT.

A small plant for evaporating. It may contain hints even for those who do not wish to erect so elaborate a building.

"A conveniently arranged one kiln evaporator and plan is shown herewith," says the magazine. "The space is divided into a furnace room 14 by 16 feet and a somewhat smaller workroom, in which the apples are pared. An upright bleacher, which also serves as an elevator for raising the fruit to the second floor, is placed in this room.

"The second room is divided in a similar way. The kiln has the same dimensions as the furnace room, with a capacity of 75 to 100 bushels of unpared fruit at each filling. The workroom on this floor contains the slicer and the upper portion of the bleacher. The dried fruit as it is taken from the kiln can also be held here temporarily if desired.

Such a building may be so constructed that it will be useful for many other purposes during the course of the year than that for which it is primarily intended. In constructing kilns the same general principles are followed, whether the evaporator is a small one with only a single kiln or an extensive establishment having several kilns. The most satisfactory kiln, all things considered, is about twenty feet square. This is a convenient size to fill, so far as the preparation of the fruit is concerned. The heat can be well regulated, made sufficiently intense for the purpose desired and evenly distributed so that the fruit will dry uniformly, and for various minor reasons a kiln of this size is a desirable unit in the construction of evaporators of this type.

"A kiln consists essentially of a floor made of slats and placed over a furnace room or over a system of steam pipes. The floor is usually built from ten to twelve feet above the floor of the furnace room. Provision should be made for regulating the heat by means of small openings at the base of the walls communicating with the outside. These can be opened or closed, as desired. The inflow of cold air can thus be regulated. Such control is especially desirable in windy weather.

"If the evaporator is a frame building, the walls of the furnace room may well be plastered or covered with asbestos paper to lessen the danger of fire, which may otherwise be great because of the intense heat generated. If the walls, at least the portion below the kiln door, are double, with an air space between the two sides, the insulation will be more perfect than if they are solid or of only a single thickness, thus best conserving the heat and increasing the efficiency of the plant. The height of the walls of the kiln above the drying door should be sufficient to permit an attendant to work on the floor conveniently and with comfort.

"Some means for the escape of the air laden with moisture from the fruit is necessary. This may be provided for by means of an opening in the roof, or a cupola-like ventilator may be built, the sides of which should consist of slats placed so they overlap one another as in an ordinary window blind. The kiln floor is constructed of strips especially designed for the purpose. Such floors are generally made of poplar or basswood strips three-eighths of an inch thick, one inch wide on the top surface and one-half inch wide on the under side. In laying the floor these strips are placed one-eighth to one-fourth inch apart on the upper surface. This makes the space between them wider on the under side than on the upper, as shown, thus allowing the small particles of fruit which work down between them to drop through without clogging the intervening spaces."

WHEAT SHOCKS.

It is Essential That They Should Be Carefully Built.

There are many ways to build a shock of wheat; but, like all operations, there is a right way and a wrong way. In doing this work there should be a system, and each shock should be built in exactly the same way. When the grain is fairly ripe set up two shocks of two bundles each, all leaning toward the center. Then set a bundle at each end, two at each side and two well broken and flattened and put on endways for caps. This makes a shock of a dozen bundles, a good size for grain cut at the proper stage of ripening; also large enough to stand up well and not so large but that two cap bundles will cover it. If smaller shocks are desired only one bundle need be set at each side. If a larger one, three bundles may be set on each side.

Another common method is to set up six bundles by twos and complete as before, but I think the former method makes a better braced shock. I am thoroughly convinced that cap bundles will not hang on as well during heavy winds when crossed.

Many people set their bundles two by two in long shocks without caps. This may do for low patches that are green or full of weeds, but is an unsafe practice to follow for all grain. If a period of wet weather follows the shocking, the heads are exposed, and many kernels will sprout and even grow, while if well capped only the heads of the upper cap bundle are exposed. I have known shocks well capped to stand long periods of wet weather without injury, while the grain in uncapped, poorly built shocks was much injured. —Exchange.

RENEWING THE SOIL.

How a Wornout Farm Has Been Made Profitable.

"Sixteen years ago I purchased a farm of 160 acres that had been owned by a widow who rented fields to her neighbors on shares, and of course the tenants took their portion home and fed it on their farms and returned nothing to this farm," writes a correspondent.

"When I commenced to farm it, I found the clay land only produced ten to fifteen bushels of corn per acre, the black ground from thirty to forty bushels. The clover was so light on the clay land it did not pay to cut it. I put in a good many rods of the ditch, fed all the grain except wheat that grew on the farm, saved all the manure and spread it on the poor spots and raised one crop of corn, one of wheat and one of clover in succession. I plow eight inches deep, but never plow or turn or stock on ground when wet.

"Now the clay land will produce thirty to forty bushels and black land fifty to sixty bushels of corn per acre, wheat fifteen to twenty-five and clover so heavy that all had to be stirred before it would cure. I have never used a pound of commercial fertilizer. I expect to continue increasing the fertility of the farm by the same process."

DRAFT HORSE INDUSTRY.

Never in the history of horse breeding operations in the west have prices paid for brood mares of draft blood been so high, says the Breeder's Gazette, Chicago. The shippers naturally attended all the sales where big drafters would be offered, but in all instances of which we have been informed the local farmers outbid the professionals and kept the mares at home. There is much of promise in these reports. They mean that before many years we will have a larger supply of the weighty sorts which pay off mortgages in large lumps.

From time to time we receive inquiries concerning the sort of gelding for which the dealers will pay the most money. Bays and browns always sell for their full value. Most generally the weighty draft geldings of that color show up with more or less white about the face and feet, showing thereby most frequently a British extraction. There are plenty of bays and browns, too, that show no white and yet most unmistakable French or Belgian ancestry. Considering the large number of black Percheron stallions which have been doing service for the past fifteen years in this country, it is strange that not more black geldings reach the market. When one scans the prize list of the eight international exhibitions which have been held, one cannot fail to be astounded at the extremely small percentage of blacks which have won. That percentage is not much increased when one comes to inspect the entry lists, and it is open to doubt if the most of the blacks shown have not belonged to the British breeds and not to those of continental Europe. As a general thing, however, the trade has come rather to divide the supply of big drafters into Percherons and Clydes, the former including such grade Belgians as are on the market and the latter, of course, the get of Shire horses. The dealer does not bother his head much with strict definitions. One still often hears of Normans in the trade, though that is entirely an erroneous term and signifies only that the gelding shows by his appearance that he springs from an ancestry tracing to continental and not insular Europe.

Intimately tied up with the demand for draft geldings and their values is the whole stallion business. Just so long as prices for the heavy ones keep up on the level on which they now rest the demand for ton stallions will remain active. Reports from practically all of the representative stables are to the effect that the sweep has been almost clean—only a very few stallions left over.

Taken up one side and down the other, the draft horse industry could not well be in a much more flourishing condition. Farmers are recognizing that it pays to work heavier horses and heavier machinery. Help, or at least the sort of help it pays to hire nowadays, does not promise to get much more plentiful, and the solution of the farm labor problem lies in the utilization of heavier machinery and larger draft horses. There is just as much need for the real drafter on the soil of the corn belt as there is in the city, and maybe a little more. The farmer needs the weight in the collar even more badly than, or at least quite as badly as, the city team user, and this need will press more forcibly upon him in time to come. With this sort of market before him and with the added knowledge that for his best specimens fancy prices will always be forthcoming the corn belt farmer who does not devote his attention to the production of heavy horses is losing a great opportunity.

Atlanta a Great Mule Point.

G. M. Rommel in a summary of the mule trade says: Atlanta is coming to be one of the great mule distributing points of the south and is now the greatest one in the southeast. No doubt South Carolina farmers get many of their mules from Atlanta, which were first sold on markets two or three times as far from Atlanta as Columbia. With the development of Atlanta as a mule market a golden opportunity exists for any one brave enough to break away from custom and act as a pioneer in mule raising in South Carolina and the southeast.

FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE

Makes Kidneys and Bladder Right

Sanderson's ...Strategy.

By CECILY ALLEN.

Copyrighted, 1908, by Associated Literary Press.

"Well, of all the unpropitious and inconsiderate times to ask such a question!" cried Judith Brainard. "No one but you, Dick Sanderson, would have chosen it."

Her tones were almost wrathful, and Sanderson shifted his gaze from her mobile face to the top of his stick, which he twirled idly.

"The idea of asking me for the twentieth time to marry you just as I was trying to decide whether to borrow a lemonade bowl and glasses from Mrs. Drake or from the Bennington girls!"

Judith pursued her troubled way, with romance pushed far into the background.

"I guess if had better be from Mrs. Drake, because she's right next door, though the Bennington bowl is much handsomer."

Dick Sanderson rose abruptly and towered above the girl of his heart.

"I think that it is all nonsense, and I wish that you'd let your career go to pot. As my wife you can sing for charity, you can run a church choir, you can teach the little daughters of the poor, you can—"

"And all on your money! If you really loved me all these years as you say you did why did you wait to tell me until—until—all our money was gone and I was poor as a church mouse?" demanded Judith, forgetting her more present vexations in the old grievance.

Dick turned suddenly grave.

"I wanted you to have your fling. I think every girl should. It's wrong to marry the first man who keeps you supplied in violets and things. You may find out that American Beauties and another man are preferable after you've been out a year or two. And I wanted my wife for keeps, not for a brief honeymoon. I wanted!"

Judith rose abruptly.

"I know it all by heart, and so I'm going over to see Mrs. Drake about the bowl and glasses."

"Really, from what I've heard of critics and writers and other bohemians, I should certainly advise a strong dash of rum in the bowl."

His tone was light, but behind it lay conviction, and Judith flushed vividly.

"I might have expected you'd say something nasty. Of course all the big people in music and art are not branded 'drawing room,' but they do things. And, oh, Dick, I want to do something. I want to show the world that my education was not all veneer—that it is practical."

Dick's eyes softened as they always did at an appeal from Judith.

"May I come? I've never seen the lions of the musical menagerie, and I promise solemnly that I will not propose to you until it is all over."

"That sounds like my old Dick. You may come and see the menagerie and—well, I won't scold if you propose after it is all over."

Judith's world had gasped when she had fled the prosperous New England city after her father's death and established herself in New York as a teacher of music. It was all entirely unnecessary. There were relatives—and Dick Sanderson.

The relatives on the whole were relieved. Dick Sanderson spent most of his time in New York for the purpose, as he expressed it to himself, of counteracting the influences of studio life.

Judith and her mother had a cunning little apartment in an eminently respectable neighborhood, and Judith had a few very prompt pupils. And now she was giving the first of a series of evenings at home. She had met many clever men and women at other "at homes" the season before and had scattered her invitations broadcast.

"You'd better not come too early, Dick," she called after the persistent one as he went down the narrow hall. "I do love some 'homey' people to talk it over with on the finish."

"All right. I'll hold back as long as I can."

But when Mrs. Drake came in with the bowl and glasses the rooms were a mass of ferns and flowers—from Dick.

"How lovely!" she exclaimed. "Flowers do give a room such an air. It makes me feel worse than ever that we cannot come tonight. But every other Tuesday, have you not?"

Judith nodded her head absently. She was trying to decide between a plain or lace centerpiece under the bowl. And not for worlds would she admit that she was disappointed. Mr. Drake was the critic on a prominent paper, and she wanted to cultivate critics.

"So sorry," she murmured perfunctorily. "I hope Mr. Drake is not ill."

"No, but some out of town relatives are coming, and they are not the sort to understand our slipping away. But we'll surely come next time. I understand that Miss Morton, the new English violinist, is to receive with you?"

"Yes, we studied together in Paris."

At 8:30 they were all in line, Mrs. Brainard in pearly silk and real lace, Miss Morton oddly English as to costume, delightfully alive as to the pleasure of the evening, and Judith a dream in black net and violets, her eyes gleam with anticipation. Everything was typical of New England and most unbohemian, even the little white capped maid engaged for the occasion.

Nine o'clock, and the trio found it

What Ails You?

Do you feel weak, tired, despondent, have frequent headaches, coated tongue, bitter or bad taste in morning, "heartburn," belching of gas, acid risings in throat after eating, stomach gnaw or burn, foul breath, dizzy spells, poor or variable appetite, nausea at times and kindred symptoms?

If you have any considerable number of the above symptoms you are suffering from biliousness, rapid liver with indigestion, dyspepsia. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is made up of the most valuable medicinal principles known to medical science for the permanent cure of such abnormal conditions. It is a most efficient liver invigorator, stomach tonic, bowel regulator and nerve strengthener.

The "Golden Medical Discovery" is not a patent medicine or secret nostrum, a full list of its ingredients being printed on its bottle wrapper and attested under oath. A glance at its formula will show that it contains no alcohol, or harmful habit-forming drugs. It is a fluid extract made with pure, triple-refined glycerine, of proper strength, from the roots of the following native American forest plants, viz., Golden Seal root, Stone root, Black Cherrybark, Queen's root, Bloodroot, and Mandrake root.

The following leading medical authorities, among a host of others, extol the foregoing roots for the cure of just such ailments as the above symptoms indicate: Prof. R. Bartholow, M. D., of Jefferson Med. College, Phila.; Prof. H. C. Wood, M. D., of Univ. of Pa.; Prof. Edwin M. Hale, M. D., of Wahnemann Med. College, Chicago; Prof. John King, M. D., Author of "Medical Dispensary"; Prof. J. M. Scudder, M. D., Author of "Specific Medicines"; Prof. Laurence Johnson, M. D., Dept. Univ. of Chicago; Prof. J. E. Ellingerwood, M. impossible to keep up conversation. Not once had the doorbell rung. Ninety-third, and the odor of cut flowers was positively oppressive.

"Do you suppose that any one is coming," said Judith in a very faint voice, "at 9:45?"

And just then the electric bell buzzed joyfully. Enter upon the scene Dick Sanderson and at his heels Hal Danton, the critic of the Social Whirl.

"Thought I'd give the crush a chance to subside," exclaimed Dick as Judith came forward, and then at sight of her face his tongue failed him, and he reached forth his hand impulsively. She gave it a trembling clasp, then went on to greet Danton.

No one could tell afterward just how it did happen, but Hal Danton certainly laughed first and at something Dick said.

"Oh, my dear Miss Brainard," he exclaimed between gales of laughter, "you don't know your New York yet! Nothing starts so early in the season. You are about a month too early—and, well, you've got to show 'em."

And no one knew just why, but Judith told him all her little successes and failures, and he proved such a sympathetic person that she finally wailed: "I would not mind at all, only that caustic Mr. Drake lives next door, and of course he'll know. It is so deathly quiet here!"

Hal Danton did not laugh this time. How often had he watched the struggle of other Judiths! But Dick Sanderson sprang to his feet and remarked with decision: "This is where we make a noise like success. Judith, I'm going out into the hall and give that bell another ring. Mrs. Drake will hear that, and then we will rattle glasses, and Miss Morton will fiddle, and you will play the piano, and we will applaud—and, well, I know that Danton here will like your brand of lemonade."

The audacity of the plan swept all objections aside. Sometimes Sanderson rang the bell and sometimes Danton. The little maid ran up and down the hall, and the glasses clicked, and Miss Morton played, and Danton sang rollicking German student songs that none had ever dreamed he knew, and Mrs. Brainard laughed until the tears threatened to fall on her fine old lace.

And when it was all over and not another soul had put in appearance Danton carried Miss Morton off in a cab and Mrs. Brainard retired to lay away the dear old pearl silk gown. The little maid went downstairs to where her young man was waiting to take her home, and Judith and Dick stood alone in the flower banked room. Then upon the sudden quiet fell a sound of muffled tapping. Judith ran to the door. There was a whispered conversation, and very soon Dick saw her hand out something on a tray. She came back with eyes shining.

"It was Mrs. Drake. She said she heard us having such a good time, and though she and Mr. Drake did not dare leave their guests now that every one had gone she just simply had to beg some of the lemonade. She had heard those glasses clicking and the music through the wall."

Dick's eyes were dancing, but Judith's were dewy with a new and tender light.

"Oh, Dick, you are simply wonderful. She thinks it was a huge success—and—and—well, you know what I promised this afternoon. You can!"

Dick gripped her hands.

"Will you, Judith—will you, dear?"

"Yes, Dick, and we'll announce it at my next evening 'at home.'"

Range for Turkeys.

It is important that the turkeys have a wide range. The birds are natives of the wild forest and they have not been fully weaned from a desire to roam over a large section of country. In growing turkeys on the farm, provision should be made to allow them to run at will over the place. Wide range insures a variety of food and that is important.

A Bad Guess.

John Hawtreys was one of England's famous whipping schoolmasters. At Eton in autumn the small boys used to buy chestnuts and roast them in a shovel over the fire. One day a boy named F., who was a great favorite of Hawtreys', had a lot of chestnuts and as a special favor was allowed to make use of the pupil room fire while the boys were all studying. Hawtreys was going in and out of the room while we were working, and on one occasion, coming in rather quietly, he caught sight of F. kneeling over the fire arranging his chestnuts. The boy's position was irresistible to any lover of the art of chastisement. Not seeing his face and supposing it was one of the other boys stealing the chestnuts, John Hawtreys quietly took his cane from his desk and, creeping forward on tip-toe, gave the wretched F. a most tremendous whack. The boy jumped up with a yell, his hands clapped behind him. Then the tutor saw who he was and said, embracing him:

"Oh, my poor boy! I am so sorry! I thought it was another boy stealing your chestnuts."

We, of course, were all delighted and roared with laughter.—London Graphic.

Danton and the Organ Grinders.

Paris has more than once made war on organ grinders. There, as here, they have their enemies and also their champions. The war, however, is an old one, and politicians had time to attend to it even at the height of the revolution.

No less a man than Danton then took the part of the musicians.

"Citizens," he cried from the tribune, "I hear that an attempt is being made to prevent the organ grinders of Barbary from playing their tunes as usual. Do you think, then, that the streets of Paris are too gay? Have the people of Paris too many songs on their lips? One after another our liberties are being wrested from us. Leave us at least the liberty of listening to the organs of Barbary, of hearing from them our favorite songs and refrains."

Danton was guillotined for reasons with which this speech had nothing to do, but the oration containing these sentiments was the last that he had the opportunity of delivering as a member of the convention.—Westminster Gazette.

Hotel Accommodations in India.

All over the world Indian hotels have a bad name to any one who has been used to a moderate degree of comfort and good feeding. They are for the most part a disgrace. Why people should have to pay from 10 rupees to 25 rupees a day in the cold season and from 7 rupees to 12 rupees a day in the hot season without receiving comfort and good feeding seems at first difficult to answer. As a rule, the feeding is most inferior, badly served up, table-cloths and napkins frequently dirty, not to speak of the knives, forks, spoons and tumblers. Bedrooms are badly looked after, and unless one has a very smart bearer it is difficult to receive proper attention. All this should not be for such prices as people pay. In many third rate boarding houses in England one could get presumably as good as what is got in some of the so called first class hotels in Calcutta.—India Public Health.

The Artistic Poison.

Passing by other drugs, each of which has its own way of making people crazy, we come to what may be truly termed the artistic poison. This is, says Dr. William H. Thomson in Everybody's Magazine, the mesquite button, which grows on a low cactus in the valley of the Rio Grande and fortunately is scarce and hard to get. Chewing this button causes the most gorgeously colored scenes to appear before the entranced vision, far surpassing, according to descriptions, the most magnificent sunsets. It would seem to be the drug for landscape painters, but unfortunately, whatever other things drugs do, they never increase efficiency. It was first discovered among the Kiowa tribe of Indians, who used it in their religious rites till missionaries induced the government to remove the Indians from where they could get it.

Lightning and Thunder.

By counting the number of seconds in the interval between lightning and thunder it is possible to figure approximately how far from the observer is the scene of the storm. Sound travels 1,100 feet a second, so multiply the number of seconds by 1,100, which will give the distance in feet from the point where the lightning flashed. For example, if ten seconds have elapsed the distance away will be 11,000 feet, or a little over two miles. It might be added that, as light and lightning travel so much faster than sound, if one survives after hearing the crashing peal he can be sure he is safe. Remembrance of this will dissipate terror.

Impostor and Malefactor.

Carlyle used to tell of an old Scotch woman who, speaking to her family, said: "There's two sons, baith doin' weel in Glasgie. Tane's an impostor, and tither's a malefactor." It was found that she meant "upholsterer" and "manufacturer."

CROSSING THE BAR.

Dying Words of Some of the World's Famous Men.

Nothnagel, who died alone in his room, noted his own symptoms to the last. A letter to his assistant is said to have ended as follows: "Written late on the evening of July 6 just after experiencing these severe attacks—died of calcification of the arteries." Traube also made observations on himself to the very end. Loock expressed a wish to be present at the post-mortem examination on himself, and among Cuvier's last recorded words is a remark, as his fingers twitched involuntarily: "Charles Bell is right: 'Ce sont les nerfs de la volonté qui sont malades.'" Dyce Davidson, professor at Aberdeen, died immediately after saying to his class, speaking of the next meeting, which was never to take place, "Four o'clock on Monday, gentlemen; 4 o'clock."

Several doctors have taken their leave with a blessing to those around them. Astley Cooper's last recorded words are, "God bless you, and goodbye to you all!" He had previously said to his physicians, Bright and Chambers, "God's will be done; God bless you both!" adding, "You must excuse me, but I shall take no more medicine." Benjamin Brodie was heard to mutter, "After all, God is very good." The saddest of all recorded last words are probably those of Oliver Goldsmith, who, when asked by his physician if his mind was at ease, said, "No, it is not!" On the other hand, William Hunter's mind seems to have been full of bright thoughts at the moment of death, for he said, "If I could hold a pen, what a book I could write!"

Pasteur and Darwin, though not belonging to the medical profession, are venerated by it as teachers. Darwin's last words were, "I am not the least afraid to die." Pasteur was offered a cup of milk and, being unable to swallow it, murmured, "I cannot." He passed away with one hand in his wife's, the other grasping a crucifix. Lastly are mentioned the last words of Mirabeau, which are said to have been addressed to a doctor. He wrote on a slip of paper, which he gave to his physician, the philosopher Cabanis, the single word, "Dormir." Another account, which may be an expanded version of this, is that after begging for an anodyne he said reproachfully to the doctor: "Were you not my physician and my friend? Did you not promise to spare me the suffering of such a death? Must I go away carrying with me the regret of having confided in you?" This is rather a long and rhetorical speech for a dying man.—British Medical Journal.

spect to his memory the convention do now adjourn until 12 o'clock (noon) tomorrow.

Addresses by Ex-Governor David R. Francis of Missouri and Colonel W. B. Holdeman of Kentucky, eulogistic of the departed statesman, and the reading of a set of resolutions that would have been presented by him had he first received recognition of the chair by Alton B. Parker followed the reading of the Nebraska resolutions. The convention then adjourned until 12 o'clock Wednesday.

Long Cheer for Bryan
Wednesday afternoon's session was devoted to routine business, the most remarkable feature of the session being a demonstration that broke all records at the mention of the name of Bryan, the cheering lasting one hour and 26 minutes. It was precipitated by the mention of the Nebraskan's name by Senator Gore, the blind orator from Oklahoma, who caught the crowd with his wit and put all hands in good humor. Then he became serious, paid tribute to young Oklahoma, who had just been allowed to put on big skirts and eat at the first table. Her Constitution, he said, was the opening wedge for human liberty and, while the President had said his opinion of it was unfit for publication, the latter was also true of the opinion held by many Americans of the President. Then came the last words that could be heard, they were. "We rejected the advice of Taft and accepted the advice of Bryan." Then followed the record-breaking demonstration.

Late Wednesday night by a vote of 615 to 387 the convention adopted the majority report of the committee on credentials in the Pennsylvania contest, which is a reverse for James M. Guffey in his fight for re-election as national committeeman.

At 8 o'clock last evening a special telegram said, "No nomination yet but Bryan will be named tonight or tomorrow. Vice Presidency in doubt. Harmony reigns."

WESTERN WIND BREAKS.

Experiments to Determine Their Usefulness to the Prairie Farmer.

The sudden run that hot winds sometimes bring to growing crops in parts of the west is well known. Blowing strongly across the unprotected plains, these winds may in a few days blast all hope of even a partial harvest. This is particularly so in the lower portion of the central plains region and in years of unusually low rainfall. Here the winds most to be feared blow from the southwest or south. In the northern plains region the farmer is exposed to the hot chinook wind, which sweeps down from the Canadian mountains. This either dries out growing crops or if it prevails before the danger of killing frosts is past causes loss through urging vegetation forward prematurely. Cold winter winds also do great injury to crops, make the climate more severe for stock and men and interfere with an even covering of snow upon the ground. This is true from Canada almost to the gulf.

In southern California dry winds from the north and northeast sweep down from the Mohave desert with destructive results. Coming in June, these winds may reduce the wheat yield of unprotected fields to almost nothing. Windbreaks of eucalyptus and Monterey cypress, now in such common use to protect orange groves and orchards, long ago convinced possessors of highly valuable irrigated land of the value of tree planting for protection purposes.

But there are two sides to the windbreak question. Some prairie farmers declare positively that belts of osage, orange, for instance, are a "nuisance."

Others cite figures to show positive benefit. A farmer who lives near Downs, Kan., gives his yield of corn from a field protected on the south by a row of tall cottonwoods as six bushels per acre more than in places where there is no protection. About fifteen acres are benefited in this way. It is highly necessary that the windbreak should occupy only sufficient land to offset this benefit.

An Illinois farmer sums up his observations upon this matter thus: "My experience is that now, in cold and stormy winters, wheat protected by timber belts yield full crops, while fields not protected yield only one-third of a crop. Twenty-five or thirty years ago we never had any wheat killed by winter frosts, and every year a full crop of peaches, which is now rare. At that time we had plenty of timber around our fields and orchards, now cleared away."

The United States forest service proposes to find out just when and how much windbreaks increase the yield of crops. Measurements and tests will be made and elaborate data will be collected by experts who will have charge of the study.

MODERN IMPLEMENTS.

Make it Possible For the Farmer to Dispense With Extra Help.

The scarcity of help on farms may ultimately drive landowners to greater economy and to a more general use of devices and conveniences which lighten the work. It is surprising how many aim to get along by muscle power alone, never trying any other method, which might save half their work.

An old farmer says that his neighbors called him lazy when he first brought a hay loader on his farm, and when he rigged up a cable and used a trip hay fork to unload his hay he had a crowd of neighbors around him, "just to see how it worked."

The economical and up to date farmer counts all of these labor savers just that much of his equipment, and it is only by using them that he is enabled to meet present conditions. The walking stirring plow and walking cultivators are back numbers. Now the sulky or gang plow is used, and three big, lusty horses will turn over three or four acres a day.

A manufacturer has got out a rotary harrow, which is attached to the plow, and the land is turned and harrowed at one operation. If any man is justified in venturing money, it is the farmer when he invests it in up to date tools and implements for more rapid and better work on the farm.

Early Tomatoes.

A truck gardener tells that this is the way he raised early tomatoes: He took a dry goods box 2 by 3 feet and eight inches deep. In each corner of the box he set a piece of two inch pipe, so that he could water the plants from the bottom, pouring in the water and letting it permeate through the soil, which was composed of a sandy loam put into the box after the bottom had been covered to the depth of three inches with well rotted and sifted stable manure. The seeds were planted and lightly covered and the soil kept moist, but not wet. In one week after planting the green tops appeared, and in three weeks they were transplanted into a similar box, being set an inch deeper than they grew in the first box. They grew in the box in sheltered places for three weeks, when they were ready for the garden.

Savoy Cabbage.

Savoy leaved cabbages are largely used in Europe. They are marked by a peculiar fine crumpling of all the leaves, particularly those of the head. They are generally of better table quality than common cabbage, more tender, finer in texture and of more delicate flavor. The plants are better able to resist cold, but do not give so large a yield of heads, and the heads are less solid and cannot be handled so well as the more common sorts.

Remedy For Mites.

Now is the time when the roosts of most henhouses are more or less alive with the terrible little mites. In kerosene we have a cheap and never failing remedy. Soak the roosts with it from time to time, or, still better, spray it all over the inside of the building, reaching every crack and crevice. It kills wherever it touches, and the treatment will save much suffering to the poor fowls and money for the owner.
